LEONARD A. MORRISON.

The death of Prof. Morrison was announced last month. Since then we have received a copy of his home paper. The Derry News, giving some particulars which we give herewith.

Probably the best history of Mr. Morrison is to be found in the sketch of his life given in the Kimball Family History in connection with his own introduction to the History, of which he was a co-editor. This Family History is now in more than a thousand Kimball families, but a small proportion of the present readers of the NEWS, as singular as this may appear, are owners of the Family History, and to these a further sketch of Prof. Morrison will be welcome. The News says:

Hon. Leonard Allison Morrison, the historian and writer, died at his home in Derry Village last Sunday morning. He had suffered for some eight years from the effects of a stroke of paralysis and was able to get about with difficulty. For a few weeks past he had been unusually feeble and the last few days of his life sank rapidly.

Leonard Allison Morrison was a son of the late Jeremiah Morrison and a descendant of the early settlers of the town of Windham. He was born in Windham, Feb. 21, 1843. He received his early education in his native town, in the Union school, Gowanda, Cattaraugus county, New York and at the New Hampshire Conference seminary at Tilton. The education received thus was well supplemented by personal study and a continuous application to books and works by the best authors.

Mr. Morrison never married, but lived with his parents till they passed away. His brothers and sisters, with the exception of one sister, died when he was quite young and thus the burden of caring for the parents fell upon him. He never allowed them to want for anything, but with the kindness and affection of a faithful son tenderly cared for them till the last. One sister, Mrs. Park of Maine, survives him.

Mr. Morrison early evinced a great fondness for reading and for many years took books from the public library in Lawrence Mass. He became interested in historical and genealogical works and soon turned his attention to that department of literary employment. He published over twenty books, most of them histories. Among the number may be mentioned "The History of Windham," "The History of the Morrisons," "The History of the Sinclair Family," "Rambles in Europe," "History and Proceedings of the Celebration of the One Hundredth and Fiftieth anniversary of the Settlement of Windham," "History of the Dinsmore Family," "Among the Scotch-Irish," "History of the Kimball Family," Poems of Robert Dinsmore, Self Styled the Rustic Bard," etc.

He was given many places of honor and trust by his townspeople. He was selectman for a number of years; was representative to the Legislature; was chairman of the town Republican committee; a justice of the peace; enumerator of the census, was a moderator a number of years, and for a number of years was a correspondent and writer for a number of newspapers. Mr. Morrison continued his literary work till he was stricken down by disease and often thereafter would attempt to write, and often gave interesting articles to the newspapers.

Mr. Morrison lived till 1900 upon the paternal farm, which was laid out in 1728 by the Rev. James MacGregor, the first minister in Londonderry. This farm was owned and occupied by his great grandfather, Lieut. Samuel Morrison, and by his grandfather and his father.

Two years ago last spring Mr. Morrison sold the old place, as he was altogether too feeble to care for it longer. He bought a place in Derry Village, adjoining the farm of W. W. Poor, and lived there the remainder of his days, being tenderly cared for by his niece, Miss Mabelle Park and her aunt, Miss Louise Park of Maine, who has been his faithful housekeeper for several years.

Interment was in the family lot in the old burying ground at the head of Windham Range, "a bleak and wind loved spot" in winter, but in summer, "where green grasses tremble in the breezes and the warm sunshine calls forth the flowers," where rest the members of five generations of his race.

C. G. Kimball has a store at Derry, N. H., the home of the late Prof. Morrison.

C. H. Kimball, late state senator, of Parsons, Kansas, is around the lobby of the legislature trying to get a bill through dividing his county court so as to get alternate sittings at Parsons and Oswego, the county seat. Parsons is a great railroad center and the most important town in the county and Senator Kimball one of its most stirring citizens.

THEIR GOLDEN WEDDINGS.

A Boston Globe dispatch from Franklin, N. H., dated Jan. 1, 1903, says:

New Year's day was an event of more than ordinary interest at the home of Mr and Mrs Lendall N. Johnson, Webster street, where Mrs Johnson's father and mother, Mr and Mrs Joseph D. Kimball of Fitchburg, Mass. celebrated their golden wedding anniversary.

Mrs Kimball, who is a daughter of Mrs Betsey Brown, one of the oldest women in Franklin, was called here by her mother's illness. Mrs Brown at 95 has had an attack of pneumonia, but is getting well, so that her illness did not mar the celebration.

Joseph Dearborn Kimball and Elizabeth Jane Brown were united in marriage at Manchester, N. H. by Rev Thomas M. Latham, a Methodist divine. Mr and Mrs Kimball settled in Lowell, Mass. both attending the Methodist church until it disbanded and then joining the Free Will Baptist church in Paige street. Their names are still upon its membership roll.

Mr Kimball went to Lowell from Franklin in 1847 and went into the grocery business with Eaton & Wilkins in Salem Street. Later he was with R. K. Runals at the corner of Merrimac and Race sts, where he remained for more than 25 years. he was also in the employ of O. B. Ranlett for a time. On March 6, 1881, he entered the employ of C. I. Hood & Co as traveling agent, going to New York city the following November and remaining in their employ until April, 1900.

Since then Mr Kimball has not been in active business. He has spent a part of the time in Fitchburg with a son and a part at Franklin with his daughter.

Mr and Mrs Kimball have three children, Charles Edger Kimball, living in Cambridge; William Clarence Kimball, who is in the clothing business in Fitchburg; and Clara Kimball, now Mrs L. N. Johnson of this city.

There are four grandchildren. Alice M. Kimball, daughter of Charles Kimball, and Beryl A. Wray, P. and Hazel, children of William Kimball.

Mr Kimball has been a member of Veritas lodge 49, I. O. O. F., of Lowell, Mass, for more than 40 years.

The Chicago Tribune of Oct., 2, 1902, has this notice of another golden wedding.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Bradley Kimball reached the fiftieth anniversary of their marriage today, and have been residents of Chicago for the last thirty-eight years, coming from Lawrence, Mass. Mr Kimball was born in Holderness, N. H., Jan. 16, 1824, and his wife in Blue Hill, Me., Aug. 15, 1839. The family circle is complete, and the three sons and a daughter, with their families, are with Mr. and Mrs. Kimball. They are Samuel H. Kimball of Oak Park, Arthur S. Kimball of Boston, Mass., Mrs. Harry Dudley French of Chicago, and Ernest M. Kimball of Winnetka. A family dinner was given last evening at the residence, Seventy-fourth street.

A PROUD FATHER.

Albert Burney Kimball of the Scandia, Kansas, Journal seems as proud of the one son as of the two daughters. He is of the Manhattan branch of the family. See History page 940, News January 1900.

A son arrived at the home of the editor Friday, January 16, in time for early breakfast. Inasmuch as his mother had had him named for several years he did not come into the world nameless, but answered at once to the cognomen John Melville. He is the fourth generation of the family in Kansas and the name John occurs in each. He is the only male representative in the Kansas branch of the tenth generation of the family in America. Needless to say he was cordially welcomed and at once made himself as much at home as a kitten under a warm stove.

HEBRON, N. H., CHURCH.

The year 1901 this town celebrated the centennial of the erection of the congregational church. The little village of Hebron is situated on the west side of Newfound lake. About one-third is in Hebron with Sugar Loaf and Bear hill on the south shore and Bridgewater and Kidder hill on the north shore. There are many summer cottages built along the lake now and in the spring after the ice goes out the fishermen have a busy time for a month or two, catching the fine salmon, pickerel, or trout that are found there in abundance.

The meeting house was built in 1801 by citizens of the town without regard to denomination. Most of the people of Hebron and Groton were either Baptists or Congregationalists. For many years each sect occupied the pulpit one-half of the time, but later the Methodists supplied a minister part of the time.

About all of the church-going people in the southern part helped build the church and many of them owned pews in it: and the people from Kimball hill to Groton corner attended there. Joseph Kimball, Messrs. Elliot, Crosby, Ross, and from the other road, toward Groton town house Phelps, Coburn, Buell, Cheneys, and others all attended the Hebron church.

On Tenney hill, north of the village, lived the Ordways, Wm. and Nathaniel Ball, Deacon Crosby, and others. They had large flocks of sheep, cattle and horses and everything looked prosperous. How is it now? Not a family living on the hill, though some of the buildings are standing and some have gone to decay.

JULIUS H. KIMBALL.

A Kenosha, Wis. dispatch says that Julius Henry Kimball, a pioneer and one of Kenosha's wealthiest citizens, died at his residence Monday morning, Jan. 29, 1903, aged 84 years.

Mr. Kimball was almost the oldest of the pioneers. His father settled here in 1836, took up a section of land and built a log house. His son followed him next year, coming to Milwaukee by boat and then staging to Southport. From then until the day of his death, he resided here and became wealthy, always keeping the home which his father erected to follow the old log house.

In this house he lived over 60 years, and it is a notable fact that it was never closed for the duties of hospitality during all that time.

The News has had frequent mention of the deceased, and his yachting experience at his advanced age.

The Rev. Clarence O. Kimball, formerly of Madison Co. Ill. is now pastor of the La Junta, Col. Methodist church.

The Massachusetts and neighboring Kimballs may get together in an Atlantic Family Association. With a little organization there will be no trouble about that Historical Fund.

THE OLD, OLD TRADITION.

Mr. J. C. Kimball of Priceton, Ind., sends a copy of the Lowell, Mass., Morning Mail, of date April 22, 1882. It contains an article entitled "The Kimball Family," which we give as follows:

The following appeared in the Mail of Jan. 3rd, and excited so much attention among those interested that the edition containing it was soon exhausted. To satisfy frequent demands for the papers containing the article we republish it:

Certain members of the Kimball family, down the river, have become interested in tracing the lineage of their race, and although the family records are somewhat imperfect they are quite successfully supplying the missing links that connect them with the distant past. Their ancestry has been traced to 1474, when members of this family lived in the County of Cumberland, England, where the etymon of the cognomen appears in the parish of Kimball. Some of the early worthies of this name distinguished themselves in the wars against the Moors, and were honored therefor by their king. The first Kimballs to settle in America were four brothers, who came to Massachusetts, and for a time lived in the neighborhood of Bradford.

In the course of the investigations that are being made there has been obtained from the herald's office in London the following description of the family arms:

"The arms are argent (silver), a lion rampant, gules (red). Upon a (sable) chief three crescents or (gold). The crest is a lion rampant, holding in his dexter paw a dagger—au proper. Motto, Fortis non Ferox."

This may be translated: On a shield or escutcheon of silver is emblazoned a red lion standing on his hind legs and pawing the air. On a broad black band across the upper part of the shield are three golden crescents. Both the "ramping and roaring lion," and the dagger which he holds, forming the crest, are of the natural color. The motto, "Strong not Fierce," explains in part the device.

The Kimballs are to be congratulated on the success that has attended their commendable efforts, especially as they do not appear to be animated by the auri sacra fames that has tempted so many to very foolish proceedings in hopes of obtaining some portion of vast imaginary unclaimed English estates.

It will be seen that here we have the story of the fight with the Moors, and the family located in the County of Cumberland, England. It would be interesting to know the grounds for these traditions. It will be borne in mind that this publication was three years before the appearance of the Hon. John Kimball's History of his branch of the family, which we believe contained the first so called coat of arms printed in colors.

This was obtained by the late Hon. William S. Kimball of Rochester, N. Y. also a descendant of Joseph Kimball⁵ (John¹, Caleb², Richard³, Richard⁴). How and where this coat of arms was obtained we do not know. But it will be observed that the description given above is the same as in both the John Kimball History and the more complete one by Messrs. Morrison and Sharples. The statement that this coat of arms is to be found in the London College of Heraldry has been vigorously denied.

The Kimball Family History, which is now, undoubtedly, the best authority we have, does not trace the family back to 1474, nor to Cumberland County. The mention of this county seems to go hand in hand with the coat of arms.

The John Kimball history seems to give some credence to the supposition that the name is of Scottish origin. It appears to the NEWS that there is a strong probability that the family may have been, if not Scotch, then of Welsh derivation. The Kimball History, it will be remembered, gives "Kymboulde" as one form of the name a few centuries ago. It is quite natural to conclude that this is of Kymric derivation, and this coincides with the North of England, or Cumberland country tradition, for which Prof. Sharples appears to have no use.

Now it is partly to settle all these questions, and to ascertain what is family history and what is tradition, that the Kimball Historical Society is trying to raise a fund to send Prof. Sharples to England.

This ought to interest every member of the family and is the purpose for which pledges have been sent out. The returns are so far encouraging. Small pledges are now coming in but more of the larger ones are desired. Why should not every one be anxious to clear this atmosphere of uncertainty and so insure a clear record. Prof. Sharples can do this if any one can. Let us all help him.

Kimballton is a town in Giles county, Virginia. There are many of the name in this state, descendants of pioneers who went there before the Revolutionary War. We have a very imperfect record of them. There are others in West Virginia of later date of whom little is known.

WELLSBORO, PENNSYLVANIA.

It is interesting to pick up a local newspaper in a locality where there are members of the family, and the country is full of such localities. We have a copy of the Wellsboro. Pa. Agitator, and from it clip the following items :

Mrs. O. S. Kimball has been elected lecturer of the Westfield Grange.

Miss Ida H. Kimball, after a long absence in Sault Ste. Marie, Michigan, has returned to Westfield to spend the remainder of the winter.

Mr. A. C. Kimball, after several months, absence in Oregon, has returned to his home in Westfield township, but will soon, it is understood, go again to Oregon, where he has valuable land claims.

Young Con Brewer was landed in jail last Wednesday on a commitment from Justice O. S. Kimball, of Westfield. He is charged with having appropriated, on about December 17th, $28, the property of Perry H. Sands.

Mr. William Kimball, who retires from the management of the county poorhouse and farm, has also served the people well. During the six years he has been at the head of the institution he has saved the taxpayers of the county about $26,000 in the running expenses compared with the record of any of his predecessors and the number of inmates has been steadily increasing. He has been kind, considerate and faithful to the wards of the county, and he will retire with the affectionate regard of all the inmates—and that is a good enough record when coupled with economy. Mr. Kimball will return to farming and lumbering on his 3,000 acre tract, lying in Richmond, Tioga and Middlebury townships.

And still no mention is made in this number of Chester F. Kimball of Wellsboro. Pa. (Hist p. 794) nor of his son Charles N. recently of Harvard College, now with the Glenn Coal Company at Oceana West Virginia (Hist p. 796.)

QUERY.

On Christmas day, Ethel Frances, daughter of Mr and Mrs F. P. Kimball of Macwahoc Me., was united in marriage to David Edwin Hayes, station agent at Bryant's Pond, Grand Trunk R. R., by the Rev. C. W. Stevens of Kingman. Of what family branch? They will live at Bryant's Pond.

ASA BURNHAM GARLAND.

(From the Portland, Me., Press.)

Mr Asa Burnham Garland, the father of Secretary Garland of the Y. M. C. A. died Thursday. He was born in West Newfield Me., Feb. 11, 1823. He was a son of Deacon John Garland who moved to Newfield one hundred years ago and died there in 1875. Asa Garland left home when he was eighteen years old and went to Lowell where an older brother was in business. In 1848 he went to Pennsylvania and became interested in railroads. In March 1851 he moved to Portland when the Atlantic and St. Lawrence railroad was being constructed and became connected with the bridge building department. When the road reached Island Pond Mr Garland took charge of the station there and occasionally ran trains as a conductor. He soon became a regular conductor and continued as such until 1893. He was in several railroad accidents and was lame for forty years in consequence of one.

Mr Garland was married in August 1853, to Elsie M. Kimball, of Stratford, N. H. Four children were born to them, Anna M., who died in 1892, George W., a shoe manufacturer of Brockton, Mass., John H., general manager of the Hastings Lumber Company in Hastings, Me., and Edward T., the secretary of the Y. M. C. A. in Portland.

Mrs Garland died Feb. 19, 1897. Mr Garland moved to Portland in December 1879, and was a member of Williston church but not connected with any fraternal organizations. After Mrs Garland's death he moved to Brockton and passed a few months there, returning to North Deering where he resided in the family of John A. Smith when he died. His brother was David Garland who was for thirty eight years the pastor of the Second Congregational church in Bethel and who dropped dead in his pulpit there fifteen years ago.

Mr Garland was at one time representative to the Vermont legislature from Brighton and Island Pond and also was a member of the school board of Island Pond for a long time.

Horace Sumner Kimball (p. 168. Nov. NEWS 1902.) sends two fine photos of Winter scenes in the Maine Woods, one showing a camp, and the other long piles of birch 'bolts' cut for making spools and dowels.

The editor of the NEWS recalls that in his young days similar bolts of the black birch were cut and peeled, and then with a sharp knife thin shavings were cut from one end, and stripped off the whole length of the bolt. These fine thin ribbons or "strippings" were then dried and used for making mattress fillings, as hair, excelsior, are now used. It was a considerable industry in some localities for a number of years.
